WHAT IS A COOKIE?

A cookie is a piece of information in the form of a very small text file that is placed on an internet user's hard drive. It is generated by a web page server, which is basically the computer that operates a website. The information the cookie contains is set by the server and it can be used by that server whenever the user visits the site. A cookie can be thought of as an internet user's identification card, which tell a website when the user has returned.

YOUR LEGAL RIGHTS

If the General Data Protection Regulation applies to you because you are in the European Union, you have rights under data protection laws in relation to your personal data:

The right to be informed – that's an obligation on us to inform you how we use your personal data (and that's what we're doing that in this privacy policy);

The right of access – that's a right to make what's known as a 'data subject access request' for copy of the personal data we hold about you;

The right to rectification – that's a right to make us correct personal data about you that may be incomplete or inaccurate;

The right to erasure – that's also known as the 'right to be forgotten' where in certain circumstances you can ask us to delete the personal data we have about you (unless there's an overriding legal reason we need to keep it);

The right to restrict processing – that's a right for you in certain circumstances to ask us to suspend processing personal data;

The right to data portability – that's a right for you to ask us for a copy of your personal data in a common format (for example, a .csv file);

These rights are subject to certain rules around when you can exercise them. You can see a lot more information on them on the UK Information Commissioner's Office website.

CHANGES TO THIS POLICY

The General Data Protection Regulation is new and the ICO is still issuing new bits of guidance about how businesses should follow it. This policy may be updated in the short term to reflect this, and also periodically over time.
